Overview

The seminar is conceived as an international meeting point for the Liquefied Petroleum Gas (LPG) industry, organized from Argentina for the world. Its purpose is to foster strategic dialogue and in-depth analysis among producers, buyers, fractionators, distributors, traders, industry specialists, policymakers, regulators, and other stakeholders across the LPG value chain.

The event will provide a comprehensive perspective on the sector's current landscape and future outlook, addressing key topics such as supply and export opportunities, security of supply, evolving demand patterns, logistics and infrastructure, regulatory and policy frameworks, and the growing role of LPG in a more diversified, affordable, resilient, and secure global energy system.

Why Argentina as a regional and global platform for LPG development?

Argentina is already an established exporter of Liquefied Petroleum Gas (LPG) to Latin American markets and is well positioned to expand its presence into larger and higher-growth destinations, including Asia and other international markets.

Driven by the development of Vaca Muerta basin, the sustained growth of natural gas production and associated natural gas liquids (NGLs), and the commissioning of new LPG processing and fractioning facilities that will significantly increase available supply, Argentina is entering a new phase of export potential.

At the same time, realizing this opportunity will require continued investment in logistics infrastructure, including storage, transportation, and port facilities—critical components of a competitive and efficient international supply chain.

The seminar will serve as a platform to strengthen existing regional partnerships, foster new commercial opportunities, anticipate evolving demand trends, and position Argentine LPG as a secure, flexible, and competitive energy solution in regional and global markets. It will also reinforce Argentina's role as a reliable, long-term supplier capable of contributing to a more diversified and resilient global energy system.

Strategic Themes

Argentine supply / Regional demand / Connection with Asia / Infrastructure and logistics
Security of supply / Regulatory frameworks / Propane and butane exports.
